

Transitional Management Information

Some key questions for your business

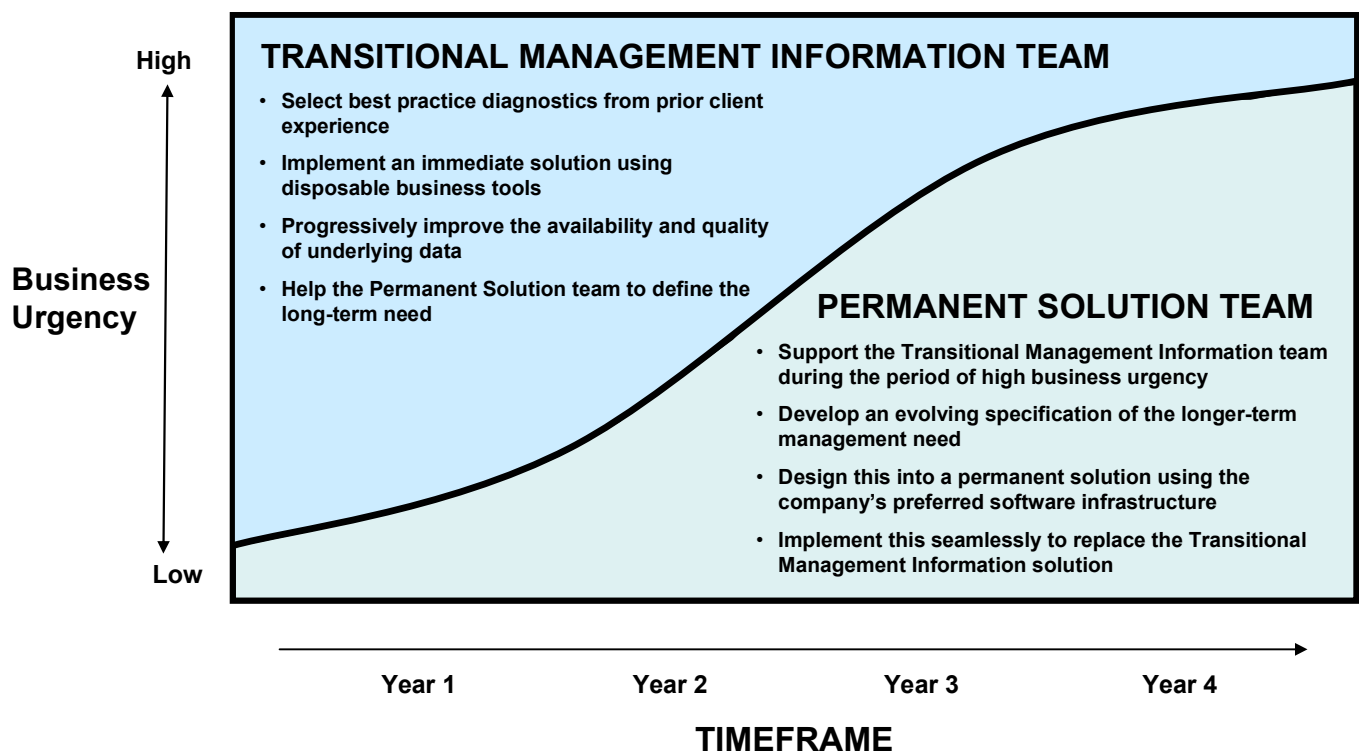

- Are you making major business decisions based on information that is missing, incomplete or arrives too late to be useful?
- Are your finance staff struggling to cope with labour-intensive spreadsheets?
- Are your people spending a disproportionate amount of their time producing data rather than analysing business performance?
- Is your business involved in a major reorganisation or acquisition which is adding further stress to current management reporting processes?
- Does your company have an IT project aimed at delivering better management information, but with a timeframe measured in several years?

The Metapraxis Transitional Management Information Solution

Metapraxis specialises in providing fast-acting Transitional Management Information, making more effective use of the data that is already available in your organisation. We work for CEOs and CFOs who need to improve management information immediately, whilst they await the delivery of a longer-term in-house project to provide a permanent solution.

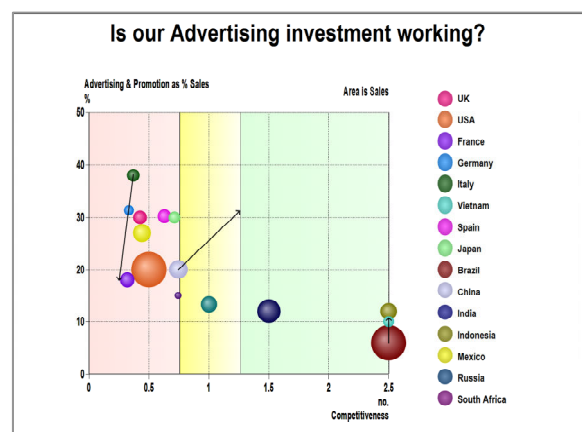

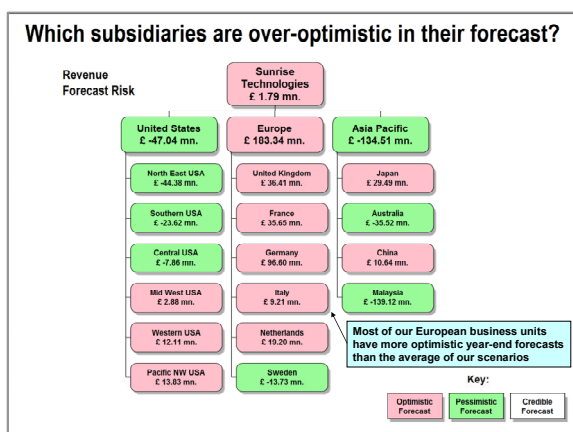

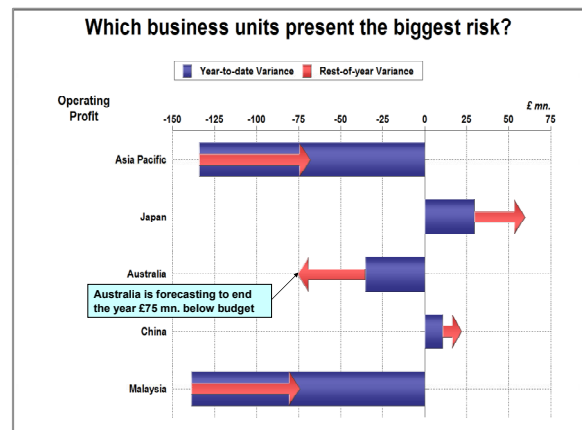

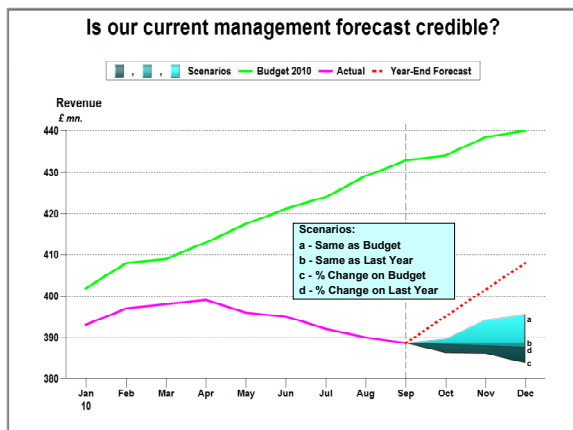

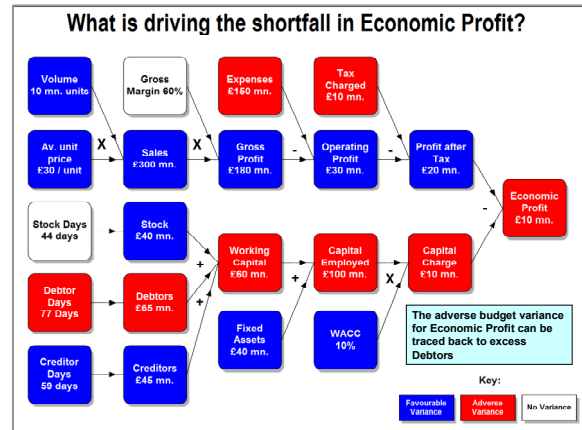

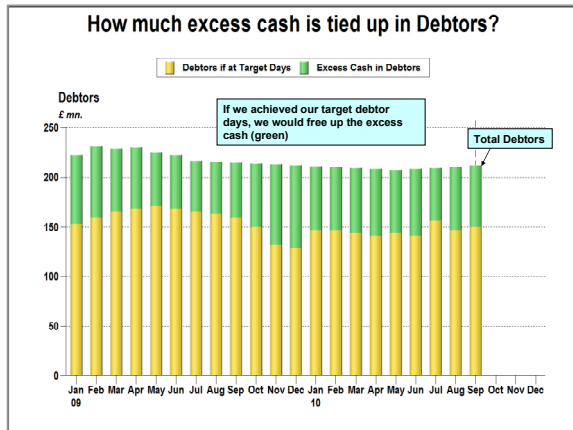

Transitional Management Information Projects are designed to provide rapid, cost-effective temporary solutions to these immediate management needs. They are not intended to compete with existing in-company projects with longer-term delivery milestones, which will progressively replace the transitional management facilities.

The framework for a typical Transitional Management Information Project is illustrated by this chart:

Addressing senior management questions

Metapraxix uses accumulated experience from many hundreds of client assignments to anticipate and understand the key questions that CEOs, CFOs and other senior executives ask about past and future performance. We deliver the first of a series of working prototypes within a matter of days. Working in partnership with your finance team we collect, aggregate and reconcile relevant data from diverse internal and external sources. We automate the routine update of the data and progressively extend these prototypes as transitional management information tools for hands-on use by managers at all levels. Finally, we work with your IT staff to develop best practice in their longer-term solution by helping them to focus on business questions such as the following:
